What would happen if one day discovers that everything you think you know about your family is a lie? And what if, behind that lie, lies a deep, dark truth, yet so irresistible that you feel compelled to deepen it? Ariella Montero wants to know the true identity of her mother, her father and... herself. She studied literature, philosophy, science and history, but she knows almost nothing about the real world and its complexities. In her world, ghosts and vampires coexist with humans, and each time the puzzle seems to be resolved, the last piece makes everything change. Gradually, Ari unlocks the secrets that have made her family lived in isolation, and begins to reflect on its nature and its chances of survival. Set in New York, England and South America, blood society refutes a number of stereotypes. In this strange new world, vegetarianism, environmentalism, research in the field of biomedicine and the ability to disappear are options available to those who drink blood and are facing the prospect of eternal life.
